IDAHO FALLS, Idaho --
The Muslims are coming.
In fact, they're here! They performed at the Colonial Theater on Monday night.

This group of stand-up comedians from the East Coast decided Americans don't really understand the American Muslim culture.

So, they took their show on the road and through laughter the audience discovered, when it comes to families, we are all a lot alike.

"We're trying to just bridge the gap by introducing ourselves to people. We're like, 'Hey! We're super normal. Let's grab a drink!'" said Negin Farsad.

The show was free and sponsored by several Idaho Falls groups interested in broadening the community's horizons.

More than 250 people were in attendance.
